

Daily Mail

Friday October 15th 2010

Still intrigued by Alexandra Escat, the model half his age, Prince Andrew is hoping to join her at a charity concert of Iranian music in London next week after he returns from a Far East tour. Former ballerina Jamileh Kharrazi, who is organising the event, has invited her friend Alexandra to the show at the 1,000-seater Logan Hall, Bloomsbury – and Alexandra has been telling pals the Prince will try to attend.

He better had, for I learn that winsome Alexandra, 25, will spend the next three months in Milan, where she has landed a modelling contract with Versace.

