

Jamileh Kharrazi

A leading woman who continuously promotes and introduces arts, music and history of Iran, abroad

Men have always been the leading force in the promotion and introductions of arts and culture; however, it is nice to know that a talented and educated lady has taken the lead for over a decade, not only in Europe, but in America too.

Jamileh Kharrazi is the managing director of the Toos foundation in London. She is coordinator and sponsor for various arts and culture programmes in London. In such programmes she invites prominent Iranian artists and musicians. She has also promoted the dance and ballet of Iran before 2000 American audience. She sets a concert for Pavarotti in Lebanon only to collect three million dollars to donate to the Harvard University. In addition to the latter she has established an orphanage in Karachi to look after two hundred orphans.